commit 04f871062da5725e0b437b32a3d6e282b3d8de9e

Author: Ubuntu <ubuntu@ip-172-31-39-248.ec2.internal>

Date: Thu May 30 23:20:52 2019 +0000

Sort of percentages was alphabetic and was the DB's fault, not the UIs. Told the DB how to sort numbers numerically.

Merged company-datatable and treemap components into the home component

Couldn't find a way to trigger changes in the datatable component from the treemap component without them being in the same component and decided I didn't have time to continue trying.

Company-performance files are unrelated and are a new widget. They do not yet have a working endpoint.

First upload of Wikipedia web scraper

Python file that retrieves all of the Wikipedia pages in the "Category: Companies listed on NASDAQ"

Accesses Wikipedia via the API (https://www.mediawiki.org/wiki/API:Main_page)

Not yet configured to run on the server. Local use only.

I've uploaded my initial pull of the Wikipedia pages separately as a .csv

Merged company-datable and treemap components into the home component

Couldn't find a way to trigger changes in the datatable component from the treemap component

without them being in the same component and decided I didn't have time to continue trying.

Company-performance files are unrelated and are a new widget. They do not yet have a working endpoint.

Results of Running the Website Crawl Script websites_full_test.csv is a sub-result, showing the company websites that did and did not get found in the crawl.

failed_to_get_website is the failed items in websites_full_test that is crossed with the wikipedia data to get websites and attempt another metadata crawl.

metadata_on_accepted_sites.csv is the key dataset in the modeling.

Website Crawl Script

Website_Crawl_Script sources the other functions and creates metadata_on_accepted_sites.csv

The ticker, finance_site, website, description, keywords from company websites where a website was found for the ticker.

It also creates: failed_to_get_website.csv for the websites where a website could not be found.
